

Arizona Charter Schools Association

State Personnel Development Grant Partner

The Arizona Charter Schools Association provides advocacy, academic support, operations support, and school development support for nearly 600 charter schools. The Association is committed to the development of high-performing public charter schools and offers extensive support for teams looking to open a new charter school or expand a current high performing school.

Sid Bailey is the Arizona Charter Schools Association's Director of Leadership Development. He has been a high school administrator in Arizona since the 1980's, including 11 years at the helm of Washington High School, a nationally recognized school chronicled as a highly effective school in a promotional series produced by the "Association for Supervision and Curriculum Development" (ASCD). He also had the honor of being the principal of another nationally recognized school from 2005-2008.

Prior to joining the Association, Sid was the Director of AZLEADS at the Arizona Department of Education providing leadership training to Superintendents, Principals, Assistant Principals, and aspiring school leaders throughout the state. He is also a trained facilitator for the National Institute for School Leadership (NISL).

Mr. Bailey will lend his expertise for the content of the online modules. He will share the progress of the SPDG activities with the Arizona Charter Schools Association and will assist in training charter schools with the modules in the future.
